SAKURAJOSUI's history

Sakurajosui has long been used mainly as a residential area, and a large apartment complex has been built in a place called Sakurajosui Gardens. Sakurajosui Gardens is currently full of nature, but it was originally called Sakurajosui Danchi, and the current Sakurajosui Gardens was completed in 2015. In addition to being a residential area, Sakurajosui is also home to Matsuzawa Elementary School and Nihon University College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, so there are various schools from elementary to university in the area, making it a popular place for students. Originally part of (Musashino-gun, Tokyo), the Kamikitazawa in Ebara-gun area was merged with Matsubaramura and then separated from Kamikitazawa in 1967 when it was incorporated into Setagaya-ku, Tokyo. Sakurajosui Station has been in use since May 1, 1937.

It was named after the rows of cherry trees along the river that runs north of the station. At Mikurain Temple, a recommended place in Sakurajosui, the benefits of the temple are expected to bring good luck and fortune, improved academic performance, and prosperous business, and going there before a test can help improve test scores.

Sakurajosui Station was originally opened in 1926 as Kitazawa Shakomae Station of Keio Electric Railway, and became Keio Shako in 1933. Sakurajosui was originally a maintenance and inspection area (also known as a railcar depot) where train maintenance and assembly were performed. The bridge station building at Sakurajosui was completed in 2008. A shopping district was established around the station, and it developed into a bright and lively area, attracting an increasing number of shoppers and many people from the countryside, and some articles say that pickpockets were rampant around the 1960s. Although the station itself is in Setagaya Ward, the south side of the station is in Setagaya Ward, and the shopping district to the north is in Suginami Ward, extending north and south of the station. There is a local community called "Sakurajosui Shotenkai" in Setagaya, but Sakurajosui is now becoming a quiet town as many people move to the central part of the city. Sakurajosui is changing with the times, and we cannot take our eyes off the changes that are coming.

The charm of kyodo

There is a theory that the name Kyodo comes from Kyodo-san Fukushoji Temple, which stands in front of Kyodo Station. A temple belonging to the Soto sect. In 1927, with the opening of the Odakyu Odawara Line, there were many commercial facilities and schools in front of the station, and the area was often used for commuting to work and school. The number of residential areas increased and the population began to increase. I believe that ease of access is what helped the population increase. It has good access to central Tokyo, and you can get to Shinjuku in just 11 minutes. It is used by many commuters and students because it allows quick access to the city center. There are various facilities around the station. There are many facilities that you can enjoy, such as crepes and the museum of Corti Tokyo University of Agriculture. Contrary to such shops, the residential area is quiet and I was able to see that there are deep ties between the communities and everyone supports each other. We believe that this is one of the attractions that makes Kyodo so livable and popular.

Kyodo used to go to school, go to work. because Odakyu line opened so there is a lot of school and facilities in front of Kyodo station. Improved transportation access, residential areas will increase to live near the station.

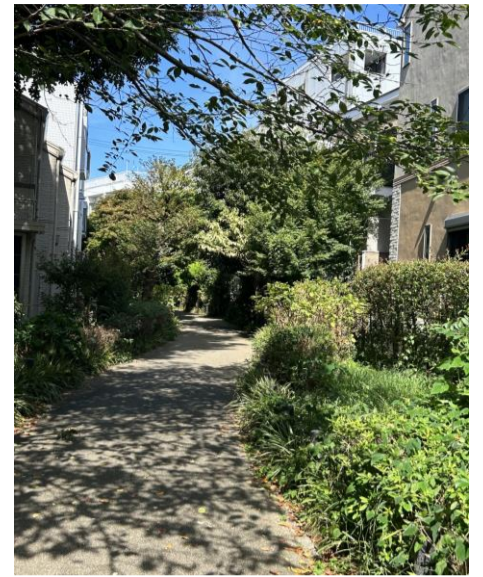

Therefore, number of there has actually increased. improving transportation access help increasing population. Good access to central Tokyo. For example, it can get to Shinjuku in 11 minutes at the earliest. As a result, a lot of students and company employees used the Kyodo station.

Actually visited Kyodo station.

At 10 am it can see many company employees.

Kyodo station is a place that a lot of people using.

Shopping streets in Shimotakaido Station

The Shimotakaido Station area thrives with five major streets: Ekimae-dori, Nichidai-dori, Ichiba-kitaguchi-dori, Koen-dori, and Cinema-dori.

The presence of these large streets makes the area a lively place, with a large number of household goods stores selling food and clothing, pharmacies, beauty salons, and other stores.

Let's take a look at the reasons why so many stores are concentrated in this area and why so many people gather here.

(1) Reasons for the concentration of stores around train stations

One possible reason is that the location of store openings was restricted due to rationing during World War II. Since that location was around the current Shimotakaido Station area, it is thought that stores and other stores are still concentrated in locations around the station.

We also considered that another reason for the high concentration of stores is related to the large number of people.

As a result of our research, we found that Shimotakaido Station has many users because it is a transfer station between the Keio Line and the Tokyu Setagaya Line.

As a basis for the high number of users, we would like to compare Shimotakaido Station with other stations. Shimotakaido Station has an average of 38,000 passengers per day, which is the highest among the stations where only rapid trains stop on the Keio Line. Shimotakaido Station also has more than 7,000 more passengers on average per day than its neighbor Sakurajosui Station, where express trains also stop.

Another reason why many people use the area is related to the fact that there are so many educational facilities. High schools and universities such as Nihon University Sakuragaoka High School, Tokyo Metropolitan Matsubara High School, and Nihon University College of Liberal Arts and Sciences are located in the area, and it is thought that many people commute to school and work in the area. There are also many kindergartens, nursery schools, elementary schools, and junior high schools in the area, as well as many residential areas with good access from central Tokyo, making the area popular as a "betting town. Therefore, it is thought that many people use Shimotakaido Station and the surrounding stores.

Reasons for the liveliness considered from (3) (i) and (ii)

The Shimotakaido area is home to many high schools, universities, and other educational facilities, and is therefore considered to be vibrant with many students and other young people. In addition, Shimotakaido has been developed as a comfortable town to live in, so it has flourished as a bedroom community, and many local residents use the shopping district concentrated in front of the station, which is thought to be the reason for the lively Shimotakaido Station area.

housing was developed in the Taisho period and still remains today. The reason it was developed at that time was the Great Kanto Earthquake. It was plnned to revitalize Kamikitazawa. It is known as the oldest existing modern suburban house in Setagaya Ward. You think It's a very quiet. That right!! There are not many people or cars. Also, There are few people after 8pm. But, crime is low. One of issues is only local train can stop. So, There are few trains and waiting time is long. Not very convenient for communing. But, there are many childcare support. For example, they have story session every ,month, read aloud and spread the word about the importance and fun of reading at library. Also, there are some parks. One of the them is Setagaya Ward Syougunike park. It is popular as a park rich in nature. There is a large open space and a wather play area. So, you can move your body while being in touch with nature. Wild birds such as spot-billd and herons gather in the poud, and geese are kept there. There are also card and turtles in the wather.Originally, after the merger with Matubara Village in part of Kamikitaza.Kamikitazawa has been popular tourist destination since Edo period. At that time, Suzuki sauthi's garden was famous. He collectd many kinds.There were especially rate things in the peony garden. So, A lot of people gathered in him garden. The zelkova in his garden is still at Midorigaoka Junior School.
